“Pamela Kikumu took over being editor of the LSL newsletter in January 2004 and produced 23 issues. Pamela gave up the job in November 2005. She attended many of my Sunday Drives at Hendon and I will always remember her Scrabble tiles - they were coated in clear nail varnish! She’d only just turned 91 on 8th October. Condolences go to all her family”.

Mauro Pratesi, London League chief editor

“I didn't know her very well, but recall playing her at Sunday Drives about 20 years ago. A fascinating person to talk to. RIP Pamela.”

Terry Kirk, former London League Chair

“Very sorry to hear about Pamela. She was a good Scrabble player. She often came to play at my home. I hadn't seen her for while. I pray her soul rests in peace.”

Kirti Shah, London League member

“I first met Pamela in Nairobi. She used to live there and I met her at Scrabble events. I met her once or twice after moving to the Netherlands but hadn't seen her recently. May her soul rest in peace.”
